

Dr Ramesh Paudel

Member

National Planning Commission

Government of Nepal

Email: rcpaudel@npc.gov.np

Website: scholar.google.com

Before joining the National Planning Commission, Dr Ramesh Paudel was an Associate Professor of Economics at the Central Department of Economics, Tribhuvan University, Kirtipur, Kathmandu, Nepal. Also, he served as a member of the Board of Trade, Government of Nepal for few years. He holds a doctoral degree in Macroeconomics, focusing on the economic development and international trade, from the Australian National University (ANU), and Master's in economics (Research) from the Wollongong University, Australia. Dr Paudel has an intensive experience in the academia in Nepal and Australia. Also, he has worked as a consultant at the different ministries of the government of Nepal, National Planning Commission, World Bank, Asian Development Bank, and International Trade Centre (ITC). His research interests include but not limit to economic growth, human resources development, tourism economics, fiscal and monetary policy, international trade, liberalization and reforms, development financing, foreign direct investment, landlocked economies, structural transformation, regional integration, and macroeconomic issues of development economics. He has authored and co-authored about four dozen academic papers in peer-reviewed national and international journals, few book chapters in the publications from Oxford University press, Palgrave Macmillan, and International Food Policy Research Institute (IFPRI), and few books from Nepal.